TALKING THERAPIES:

Two and three person relationships

A one day conference to provide opportunities for practitioners from different modalities to think together about the clinical issues involved in working with individuals, couples or family groups. This event will be of value to all practitioners working with adult individuals, children, couples, parents, families and supervisees.

Focus of the conference:

- Exploration of differences between individual, couple and family therapy
- Theoretical and conceptual underpinnings of understanding of two and three person relationships
- Impact of issues of boundaries and counter-transference, e.g. oedipal issues, on practice, style and preferences
- Impact of above issues on choice of treatment of relationship difficulties
